Discussion and self-assessment

15 trucs pour pêcher un mec.

1. Working in the same groups as before, summarise in English as many as you can of the 15 ways to catch a guy. List the 15 ways on the lines below.

Be happy	have nice feet
Be childish (act young)	Be a sparkly girl
Have good hair	go for drinks
To have lips like a celebrity	Be sporty
show him he's indispensable	Be funny
Have rythem in your skin	organize trips to the beach
show him your independent	Be in the know with
Be subtle	new technology.

2. Think back to your work last lesson. What strategies did you use or try to use to work out the meaning of the text? Which ways were the most successful for your group? What were the main problems?

we picked out the words we recognized And words that sounded like english. Some of the problems we had was when we guessed words and they were compeltly the opposite of what we thought. Some words we'nt in the dictionary.

3. According to this article, what kinds of girls do young men appreciate? How do you feel about this?

They like girls with split personalities. We think guys should like you for who you

4. What power does this article have to influence thinking and behaviour?

It tells you how to behave when you want a boyfriend.

5. If there were no words in this magazine, could you tell whether it was from France or from Australia? If so, how?

No but some models look French and you can ^{tell} some of the fashions are from France.

6. Can you describe an "average" French girl from the way girls are portrayed in the magazine? Is it different from the picture you have in your mind of an Australian girl from an Aussie magazine? Why or why not? How well do you and your friends fit the description?

Yes, you can tell what an average French girl would be like because a French girls interest is very similar to an Australian girl. Things like boys, celebrities & music. We fit the description fairly well because we are interested in the same things as what is in the magazine.

7. As a group, produce a poster of a "Superfille", showing and labeling in French as many as you can of the characteristics that we have identified in the article "15 trucs pour pêcher un mec". The poster may be drawn or take some other form such as a cartoon or collage.
